Chip Taylor's Unglorious Hallelujah + Red Red Rose and Other Songs of Love, Pain and Destruction

This double CD is Chip Taylor's (legendary singer/songwriter and composer of Wild Thing and Angel of the Morning) first solo album in six years. It combines two distinct and unique albums representing different sides of Chip and his songwriting. Unglorious Hallelujah is where Chip digs deep and takes a hard look at the world and his place in it. The songs are both clear-eyed and emotional takes on big events and the small, critical moments of life. Chip addresses the history of violence in I Don't Believe in That, the lead track on the album. Later, he tells the difficult story of his own drunk driving crash and arrest.

Red Red Rose presents the other side of Chip; the writer of "Wild Thing" who comes up with songs straight from the heart and gut. From the straight-ahead love song "I Stop Loving You" to the pure fun 50s-style "Bippity Boo" this album is full of fun songs that were written quickly. Both records feature Chip's easy way with melodies and hooks and were performed with the same stellar band including John Platania (Van Morrison) on guitar, Anton Fig (David Letterman Show) on drums and Carrie Rodriguez with backing vocals.
